

SPACE NIGHTS

8PM, RAIN OR SHINE ▪ ACTIVITIES FOR ALL AGES ▪ COME VIEW SPACE

The Van Vleck Observatory at Wesleyan University will open its doors to the public every Wednesday night, rain or shine, for a series of space nights. Come talk to students and faculty about the latest space-related discoveries by scientists at Wesleyan and around the world. The events will begin with a half-hour presentation followed by a chance to see the sky through Wesleyan's telescopes (weather permitting). Space nights are intended to be for visitors of all ages, although the talks are primarily aimed at high school level and above.
